Subject: The terms agains MS are not strict enough

Dear sir,

I am not a lawyer, I am an ordinary consumer with no particular connections.
The terms published as meeting the antitrust violations are not strict enough.

Over the past years, I have noted the recurring problems Microsoft has had in meeting the terms of previous settlement decrees. This is a worrisome place to start.

The terms published in the current plan don't seem to have distinct "teeth" to speak of in the event of non-compliance.

Last, the terms don't seem to address the actual issues that led to the court case,
and appear to allow Microsoft to benefit from the illegal activities that have been identified.

Thanks
